

Jittery Pens Productions present

CROSSING

A dynamic new play investigating life in the city

Written by Arghierenia Kyrimi, Florence Wright, and Ugo Nelson

Saturday 11 th August at 3pm	The Hen and Chickens Theatre
Sunday 12 th August at 3pm & 7.30pm	109 St Paul's Road
Tickets: £9 (£8 conc.)	London
Available from www.camdenfringe.com	N1 2NA

It is 2018 and the population count of London totals 10.66 million people. Of these, 2.67 million cross paths on the tube every day. The eye of the average commuter will fall on hundreds of people every day, but they will never know any more about them apart from the snap judgements they might make based on their appearance.

'Crossing' intends to observe and understand the people we see every day on the busy tube. We tend to put people in boxes and assume things about them but everyone has their own story. This piece investigates these stories and relationships as we follow our characters trying to make sense of their lives in the city.

Jittery Pens Productions is a diverse, new company founded by three recent Drama Studio London graduates; Arghierenia Kyrimi, Florence Wright, and Ugo Nelson. The show tackles issues of life in a big city, loneliness, mental health, sexual assault, immigration, racism, friendship, love and relationships.

Tomas Stone has joined Jittery Pens Productions as the director of 'Crossing'. His introduction to theatre started in 2012 with the company Frantic Assembly. Since Graduating in 2016, Tom has continued to work in theatre with interests in devised projects and movement within performance.

For more information and press photos please visit:

www.jitterypens.wixsite.com/productions

Or contact Arghierenia Kyrimi on 07557477879 / jitterypensproductions@gmail.com